Consultation and Coordination

Public Involvement

Throughout the study process, the study team gathered public input on issues, possible actions and alternatives. The scoping process included meetings with agencies and organizations, public meetings and workshops, newsletters, a web page, and written public comments. These sources were used to identify the issues, alternatives, and impact topics to be considered for the special resource study and environmental analysis, and to keep the public informed and involved throughout the study process.

PUBLIC SCOPING AND WORKSHOPS

The initial scoping process extended from July through September 2000. A notice announcing the public meetings was mailed out on July 14, 2000. Meeting notices were available in Spanish and a Spanish translator was available at public meetings. Meetings were held on August 3, 2000 at Fort Hunter Liggett Headquarters and at King City, California and on August 5, 2000 at Salinas, California. Approximately 100 people attended these public meetings. The National Park Service met with neighboring landowners, local historians, and resource conservationists. A total of 200 comments were received throughout the scoping process. A summary of the comments received can be found in "Appendix H: Summary of Public Comments." The scoping process ended on September 30, 2000. Throughout the planning process, the planning team has been accepting public input.

NEWSLETTERS AND WEB PAGE

The National Park Service study team published three separate newsletters, in September 2000, December 2000, and August 2001 to keep community members and others up to date on the study process. The mailing list included approximately 500 names. All information sent by mail has also been available on the web site for the study, www.nps.gov/pwro/fhl. There has been periodic media coverage. Some of the written materials were available in Spanish, including newsletters and information on the web site.

Agency Consultation

The National Park Service study team has consulted with federal, state, and local agency representatives in conducting this study. In October 2000, the National Park Service sent out a letter notifying federal and state agencies about the study and requesting agency input. Throughout the study process, joint meetings were held with the U.S. Army, California State Parks, the U.S. Forest Service, and other agencies. The following is a brief description of various consultations with agencies.

FEDERAL

Coordination meetings were held in 2000 through 2003 with US Army Forces Command, BRAC Command, U.S. Army Reserve Command, Fort Hunter Liggett Command, US Army Satellite Control (SATCON), and Army and Air Force Exchange Service (AAFES). Several roundtable meetings were held to review sections of the draft study report. The planning team consulted with Fort Hunter Liggett Cultural and Natural Resource Management staff throughout the planning process. Site inspection of BRAC excess buildings occurred in 2001.

The team consulted with the Los Padres National Forest staff and other U.S. Forest Service officials on alternatives and resource information. The team consulted with the Fish and Wildlife Service officials on federally-listed species.

The team briefed the offices of U.S. Senator Barbara Boxer, U.S. Senator Dianne Feinstein, Congressman Sam Farr, and Congresswoman, Nancy Pelosi on the study process.

STATE

The team coordinated with Hearst San Simeon State Historical Monument and California State Parks managers on sections of the draft study report including significance, feasibility, management alternatives, and environmental impacts.

The team consulted with California Department of Fish and Game on state-listed species. The team consulted with the California State Historic Preservation Officer (SHPO) on cultural resources.

Native American Consultation

The planning team met with the Salinan Tribal Council in Jolon, CA in 2001 to provide an update of the study process and to hear the council's ideas and concerns. In 2003, the team provided an update on the planning process for Gregg Castro, Tribal Council Chair and learned about current Salinan activities and concerns. Tribal members also participated in public meetings regarding the study process.
